Rebello Wines will be launching the latest addition to its strawberry wine range at the Melbourne Food & Wine Festival on March 20.

Named Lola, the wine is made entirely of strawberries and will be available at the Rebello Wines Cellar Door stand.

Lola is described as "a fragrant semi sweet table wine, with aromas of pure strawberries that have a lingering palate of juicy ripe berries with a slightly dry finish. "

The subtle sweetness of the wine compliments Asian cuisine, cheese platters or desserts and is best served very chilled.

The name "Lola" comes from the Phillipines and means Grandma in tagalog, and is a tribute to proprietier Ruth Gallace's mother.

"Throughout history the name Lola has been attributed to strong, smart and sexy women," Ruth said.

"Family is so important to us and our business, and we felt it was fitting to name some of our premier wines after the people that we love as we did for our first wine Charlotte that was named after our daughter who was born in 2008."

Rebello Wines is a new generation of winemaking on the Mornington Peninsula that draws on its Italian heritage and specialises in premium strawberry wines, liquers and innovative blends.

With more than 20 stockists in and around Melbourne, Rebello Wines has a range of fruit blends - Lola, Charlotte, Strawbellini, Fragola Cielo, Fragola Port, and Fragola Amore - welcoming a revolution in how fruit wines are produced and enjoyed.

Originating in the strawberry fields of Sunny Ridge on the Mornington Peninsula, Rebello Wines are handcrafted using a mix of leading edge innovation and traditional techniques developed by generations of the Gallace family in Italy and now in Australia.
